Many people live on the Earth, and they use many things every day. When it is time to throw away the things that they don't need any more, where should they put them?

Some people think that we should share the things we don't need any more with other people. Do you think that is a good idea?

Some things, like things made of glass and plastic and paper, can be recycled and made into something else that is brand new, and can be used again. What do you think about that?
